New Delhi, the 7th October 1953

S.R.O. 1933.—In pursuance of section 17 of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (XIV of 1947), the Central Government hereby publishes the following award of the Industrial Tribunal, Dhanbad, in respect of the industrial dispute between the Dhemo Main Colliery and their workmen.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT INDUSTRIAL TRIBUNAL AT DHANBAD.

REFERENCE No. 5 OF 1953

PRESENT:

Shri L. P. Dave, B.A., LL.B., Chairman.

PARTIES

Employers in relation to the Dhemo Main Colliery

AND

Their workmen

APPEARANCES:

Shri S. K. Bhattacharya, Chief Welfare Officer, M/s. Macheill & Barry Ltd.—
For the Employers.

Shri Sushil Kumar Rudra, Pleader, Asansol.—For the workmen.

AWARD

By Government of India, Ministry of Labour Order No. LR-2(371) dated 22/28 April 1953, the dispute between the employers in relation to the Dhemo Main Colliery and their workmen regarding the following matters has been referred for adjudication to this Tribunal:

- "1. Was the transfer of Shri Dwarika Singh, Overman, Dhemo Main Colliery to Kenduadih Colliery justified?
2. Was the dismissal of Shri Dwarika Singh for failure to comply with the transfer order justified?
3. If the dismissal was not justified, what relief should be given to Shri Dwarika Singh?"

2. Notices were issued to the parties and thereupon the workmen represented by the Colliery Mazdoor Congress filed their written statement Exhibit 4, contending inter alia that one Dwarika Singh was working under the above named employers in the Dishergarh field for about 23 years and as overman in the Dhemo Main Colliery for about 10 years with exceptional good record of service. He had to perform diverse skilled manual work including clerical work. He had been and was still a very important and prominent member of the Colliery Mazdoor Congress and was also an important member of the Pit Committee of the Dhemo Main Colliery. In about September or October 1951, various industrial disputes affecting the interests of the workmen of the Dhemo Main Colliery were pending settlement and the services of Dwarika Singh were essential for the carrying on of the bargaining on the part of the Union. From about the middle of September, the said Dwarika Singh was ailing and from about 14th October 1951 he became very ill and the management placed him on sick leave, having sent him on 18th October 1951 to the hospital. During the said period of sick leave, the said Dwarika Singh was served with an order of transfer dated 16th October 1951. The said order of transfer was mala fide, as it was transfer to a far off colliery for no justifiable cause and at a time when he had been under medical treatment and could not be spared for maintaining industrial peace. He was not physically in a position to comply with the said order of transfer and his duties and responsibilities for promoting and maintaining industrial peace did not justify his leaving his place of work at the above Dhemo Main Colliery. Immediately on receipt of the order of transfer, the matter was brought to the notice of the Conciliation Officer by the Colliery Mazdoor Congress. Conciliation proceedings were started by him on 29th October 1951. While these proceedings were pending, the management wrongfully served on Dwarika Singh a charge-sheet on or about 16th November 1951 calling upon him to show cause why disciplinary action should not be taken against him for wilfully refusing to carry out the transfer order. He duly showed cause in writing but thereafter without holding any inquiry, the management most unfairly and unjustly and illegally dismissed him. The employers have deliberately violated the provisions of Section 33 of the Industrial Disputes Act. The order of transfer and dismissal amounted to unfair labour practice and victimisation. The workmen therefore prayed that it should be declared that the transfer of Dwarika Singh was not justified, and also that his dismissal was not justified and that he should be reinstated in his former post with all arrears of pay, allowances, bonus, etc.

3. By their written statement Exhibit 5, the management contended that the reference was bad in law as Dwarika Singh was not a workman within the meaning of the Industrial Disputes Act. He was an overman and was an official of the company and a member of the supervisory staff and neither a manual nor a clerical worker. The management had every right according to the provisions of the standing orders to transfer any of its employees from one colliery to another under the same management. The order of transfer was communicated to Dwarika Singh on 17th October 1951 and on that very day he reported sick. He was declared fit by the medical officer on 22nd October 1951. The Colliery Mazdoor Congress took the question of his transfer to the Conciliation Officer who heard both parties on 25th October 1951 and the conciliation proceedings failed on the same day as no amicable settlement was arrived at. The Conciliation Officer sent his report to Government on 31st October 1951 and the management believed that the conciliation proceedings were terminated within three or four days after this. As Dwarika Singh refused to comply with the order of transfer, a charge-sheet was duly issued to him, on the basis of which he was dismissed. The order of dismissal was sought to be communicated to him through peon book, but he refused to accept the same and hence the management sent the order by registered post which was returned to the management with the endorsement from the postal authorities that the addressee had refused to accept it. It is untrue that Dwarika Singh had to perform diverse skilled manual work including clerical work. The management had no knowledge that he is or was a very important and prominent member of the Colliery Mazdoor Congress. He never held any office, not even a membership of the Executive Committee of the Colliery Mazdoor Congress, till August 1952. He was not even a member of any pit committee or works committee at any point of time before his dismissal. The management denied the correctness of the statement that various industrial disputes affecting the interests of the workmen were pending settlement in or about September or October 1951 or that Shri Dwarika Singh's services were essential for carrying on the bargaining on behalf of the workmen of the colliery, or on behalf of the Union. The management denied that Dwarika Singh had been ailing from the middle of September or that he became very ill on 14th October 1951. He complained of pain in the Epigastrium for the first time on 17th October 1951, the very day on which the order of transfer was communicated to him. He was declared fit by the Colliery Medical Officer on 22nd October 1951. It is not a fact that the order of transfer was served on him during the period of his sickness. He pleaded sickness only after the order of transfer was communicated to him. The management repudiates that the order of transfer was mala fide. He was transferred without any prejudice to the service conditions and without in any way adversely affecting his emoluments. The exercise of right to transfer Dwarika Singh was not mala fide. The management never insisted that he should go to the place where he was transferred during the period he was ailing, though the management had every cause to suspect that his plea of illness was a fake. Sufficient time was given to him to join at the place he was transferred and the management took no action against him for a considerable time even after 22nd October 1951 when he was declared fit. He never made any application to the management requesting extension of time for compliance with the order of transfer. There was no question of insistence on the part of the management that he should go to the place of transfer while he was not physically in a position to do so. It was denied that any disciplinary action was taken against him during the pendency of conciliation proceedings or Tribunal proceedings. There was no violation of Section 33 of the Industrial Disputes Act. The management therefore prayed that the reference should be dismissed and it should also be held that Dwarika Singh's transfer was bona fide and legal and his dismissal was justified.

4. The first preliminary objection raised by the management against the reference is that it is bad in law because Dwarika Singh was not a "Workman" as defined in Section 2(s) of the Industrial Disputes Act and hence the dispute regarding his dismissal would not amount to an "Industrial dispute" as defined in Section 2(k) of the Act. In this connection, Mr. Rudra appearing on behalf of the Union contended firstly that this Tribunal was not competent to go into the question whether Dwarika Singh was a "workman" and whether there was an "industrial dispute" or not; secondly, that as the dispute was taken up by the Union, it amounted to an industrial dispute whether it related to a workman or not, and lastly that Dwarika Singh was a "workman" and hence in any case, the present reference was good. I am unable to accept any of these contentions.

5. As I said above, the first contention is that this Tribunal is not competent to go into the questions whether Dwarika Singh was a workman and whether there was any "industrial dispute". It was argued that under Section 10 of the Industrial Disputes Act, as it now stands after its amendment by Act XVII of 1952, the Government can make a reference to a Tribunal for adjudication, when it is of opinion that any industrial dispute exists or is apprehended. It was therefore contended that it was a matter for the Government to decide whether it was of opinion that any industrial dispute existed or not. If it was of that opinion, it could make a reference and it was argued that as Government had made this reference, it meant that it had come to that opinion and the Industrial Tribunal could not go behind it. In other words, if the Government felt that there was an industrial dispute, the Tribunal could not consider the question whether there was really an industrial dispute or not. I do not agree with this contention. The above section empowers the Government to make a reference to a Tribunal, if it is of the opinion that an industrial dispute exists; and making of a reference would raise a presumption that an industrial dispute did exist; but this presumption could be rebutted and if it is found that there was really no industrial dispute or that the dispute could not be said to be an "industrial dispute" as defined in the Act, the reference would be bad in law. In this connection, it was also argued that under Sub-Section (4) of Section 10, the Tribunal has to confine itself to the adjudication to the points of dispute specified by the Government in the order of adjudication and matters incidental thereto and as in the present case, the points which have been specified by the Government for adjudication did not contain the question whether Dwarika Singh was a workman or not, the Tribunal could not go into that question. The question whether Dwarika Singh was a workman or not would be necessary for deciding whether an industrial dispute existed or not. If there was no industrial dispute, the reference would be bad in law. In other words, this question would cut at the root of the reference and the adjudication of "is question would be necessary before the reference could be legally heard.

In my opinion, therefore, none of these contentions can be accepted and it will be open to the Tribunal to consider whether there was an industrial dispute or not. Of course, the fact that Government has made a reference would mean that it is of opinion that an industrial dispute existed; but this would only raise a presumption which can be rebutted.

6. It was then argued that when the Union took up the case of an employee it amounted to an industrial dispute whether that person was a "workman" or not. An industrial dispute as defined under Section 2(k) of the Act means any dispute or difference between employers and employees, or between employers and workmen, or between workmen and workmen, which is connected with the employment or non-employment or the terms of employment or with the conditions of labour, of any person. The word "any person" used in this definition has been held to be meaning a "workman". See Labour Appellate Tribunal, Full Bench case of United Commercial Bank Limited Vs. Mr. K. Gupta, (1952) 1, L.L.J. 782 and N. K. Sen and others Vs. Labour Appellate Tribunal of India and others (1953) 1, L.L.J. 6. In other words, unless the dispute was connected with the employment or non-employment or terms of employment or with the conditions of labour of a workman, it could not amount to an industrial dispute. It was, however, said that if the dispute was taken up by a union, it would become an industrial dispute, even though it related to a person who was not a workman and in this connection, reference was made to the case of D. N. Banerji Vs. P. R. Mukherjee and others, 1953 Supreme Court Appeals, 303. That was a case which related to the dismissal of a Sanitary Inspector and a Head Clerk by a Municipality. Their case was taken up by the Union and the matter was referred to a Tribunal for adjudication. The main question that was raised before the Supreme Court was that the Industrial Disputes Act could not apply to municipalities and their employees and that the municipality could not said to be an industry. After considering this question at length, the Supreme Court held that the definition in the Industrial Disputes Act included disputes that may arise between municipalities and their employees in the branches of work that can be said to be analogous to the carrying out of a trade or business. It may be noted that the Supreme Court in its Judgment has specifically stated that no grounds were urged before them or before the High Court that the Sanitary Inspector and Head Clerk of the municipality were officers and not workmen within the meaning of the Act and the dispute raised on their behalf by the Union of which they were members was an industrial dispute within the meaning of the Act. In other words, the fact that the employees concerned were workmen was not challenged; and though it was a dispute relating to an individual workman, it was held to be an industrial dispute as it was taken up by the Union. It was not a case where the person concerned was not a workman. The Supreme Court has not laid down or even suggested that a dispute relating to the employment or non-employment of an employee who was not a workman would become an industrial dispute if taken up by the Union. I therefore do not agree with this contention also.

7. The last contention of Mr. Rudra in this connection was that in any case Dwarika Singh must be held to be a workman. It is an admitted fact that Dwarika Singh at the relevant time was working as an overman and the question that has got to be considered is whether an overman was a workman as defined in the Industrial Disputes Act. The definition of a workman given in the Act is:

"2(s). 'workman' means any person employed (including an apprentice) in any industry to do any skilled or unskilled manual or clerical work for hire or reward and includes, for the purposes of any proceedings under this Act in relation to an industrial dispute, a workman discharged during that dispute, but does not include any person employed in the naval, military or air service of the Government."

Mr. Rudra's contention was that there was nothing to show in the definition that a member of the supervisory staff was not a workman. I agree that the definition does not mean that the person must not be a member of the supervisory staff for being called a workman, but the definition does require that a person before he could be held to be a workman must be doing any skilled or unskilled, manual or clerical work. The important question for consideration is whether the duties of a person include his doing skilled or unskilled, manual or clerical work. If he is not to do any such work, he could not be called a workman and a person whose duties are purely supervisory and who has not to do skilled or unskilled, manual or clerical work, cannot be held to be a workman.

8. It was contended on behalf of the workmen that the definition of an industrial dispute requires that the person should do "skilled or unskilled manual or clerical work," and this would not necessarily mean that he must do either manual or clerical work. It was argued that skilled, unskilled, manual or clerical, were adjectives to the word "work" and doing of any of the work mentioned in any of these adjectives, would be sufficient to hold that the person is a workman, i.e. a person doing either skilled work, or unskilled work, or manual work or clerical work could be held to be a workman. If this was the intention of the Legislature, the word "or" would not have been used between "skilled" and "unskilled". In such a case, there should have been only one "or" between manual and clerical and the fact that the word "or" is also used between skilled and unskilled would mean that all these adjectives are not alternative. The alternates are skilled or unskilled and in addition manual or clerical, i.e. a person to be held to be a workman, he must be doing manual work or clerical work, which may be either skilled or unskilled. This has been the interpretation put on this definition in all the reported cases. In this connection, I would only cite the case between Ford Motor Company Limited and Ford Motor Staff Union reported in the latest issue (September 1953) of the L.L.J. at 1953, II, 344 and the Labour Appellate Tribunal has held that essentially the question whether a person is a workman or not will depend upon the nature of work he does; whether it is manual or clerical work, skilled or unskilled; and the true question is: is his work in the main clerical or manual work so that it falls within the definition of workman; the question whether he is supervisory or exercises directional or controlling power poses merely a negative test of a workman which cannot be conclusive. In other words, a person cannot be held to be a workman as defined by the Act unless he is doing manual or clerical work, skilled or unskilled.

9. The question for decision therefore is whether Dwarika Singh had to do any manual or clerical work. He has not been examined as a witness nor has any evidence been led to show that his duties included manual or clerical work. Mr. Rudra only argued that he was to do skilled work and that would make him a workman. But I do not agree that a person who is doing skilled work would necessarily be a workman unless the work that he does is either manual or clerical. He may be an expert in his own line and may be doing skilled work, but unless that work is manual or clerical, he could not be a workman as defined in the Act. Even if a person has occasionally to do some manual work, that is with his own hands, it could not be said that he had to manual work because that would be a part of his work as a supervisor. See the case of W. C. Raymond and Ford Motor Company Limited (1951), I, L.L.J. 167. In the present case, there is no evidence to show that Dwarika Singh's duties included doing of manual or clerical work.

10. It has been alleged in the written statement of the workmen that Dwarika Singh had as an overman to perform diverse skilled manual work including clerical work etc. There is, however, no evidence on the point. He has himself not gone in the witness box to depose to his having to perform manual or clerical work—nor is there any other evidence to support this allegation.

11. At the relevant time, Dwarika Singh was admittedly working as an overman. I had occasion to consider the question whether an overman was a workman or not, in deciding Reference No. 35 of 1951, in a dispute between the management of the Amlabad Colliery and their workmen; and after going into the question at length, I held that an overman is not a workman. My award in that case has been published in the Gazette of India, dated May 9, 1953, at pages 584 to 591, Part II, Section 3.

12. Regulation 70 of the Indian Coalmine Regulations requires inter alia that a competent person or persons having the prescribed qualifications and having been appointed by the Manager to inspect every part of the mine should ascertain the conditions thereof and the result of such inspection should be recorded in a book kept for the purpose. Under Regulation 25, the manager of the mine has to appoint in writing such number of competent persons as would be sufficient to secure a thorough supervision of all the operations in the mine and the enforcement of the requirements of the Mines Act and of the Regulations, Rules and Bye-laws made thereunder. Under this Regulation, the manager has also to make over to the person so appointed a copy of the Regulations, Rules, and Bye-laws which affect him. Exhibit 21 is the order of the manager of the Dhemo Main Colliery passed on 3rd March 1951 appointing Dwarika Singh as overman under Regulation 70(2). The order also mentions that copies of Regulations and Bye-laws were handed over to him and further that his particular attention was drawn to Regulation 70 and 97-120 and to Bye-laws 15-19 and 37-56.

13. The duties of an overman or competent person are defined under Bye-laws 37 to 56. The different duties enumerated under these Bye-laws clearly go to show that these duties are merely supervisory and that he is not ordinarily supposed to do any manual or clerical work. Under Regulation 25, he has to be appointed to secure a thorough supervision of the operations of the mine and enforcement of the requirements of the Act, Regulations etc. Thus an overman's appointment is made for doing supervisory work and for seeing that the provisions of the Mines Act and the Regulations, Rules and Bye-laws therein are properly enforced. Bye-laws 37 to 56 also show that all the duties enumerated therein are supervisory and none of them requires any manual or clerical work to be done by him.

14. Thus, Dwarika Singh's duties as an overman were of supervisory and none of these duties required doing of clerical or manual work. That being so, he cannot be held to be a workman as defined in the Industrial Disputes Act. This would mean that there could not be an industrial dispute regarding his dismissal and the present reference would therefore be bad.

15. Assuming however that the present reference is good, I think, even on merits his transfer and dismissal were justified. It appears that an order was passed by the management on 16th October 1951 transferring Dwarika Singh who was then working as an overman in the Dhemo Main Colliery to Kenduadih Colliery also as an overman. This order appears to have been communicated to Dwarika Singh on 17th October 1951. As he did not carry out the order of transfer, a charge-sheet Exhibit 17 dated 13th November 1951 was issued against him and served on him on 14th November 1951. It stated that he had wilfully refused to carry out the lawful orders of transfer issued to him transferring him to Kenduadih Colliery and thereby violated clause (1) of order 27 of the Standing Orders. In reply to the charge-sheet, he stated that he had been carrying out all legitimate orders and was still prepared to do so. He further stated that a transfer order was issued against him on 17th October 1951 but against that order, he had filed a dispute before the Conciliation Officer. The matter was still pending and hence no further action could be taken against him and that it would be illegal. Lastly, he stated that the charge of violation of standing orders did not arise. On 16th November 1951 an order was passed dismissing him. These orders of transfer and dismissal are challenged as being unjustified.

16. In the written statement of the Union, it has been urged that Dwarika Singh was a very important and prominent member of the Colliery Mazdoor Congress and was also an important member of the Pit Committee. It was further alleged that in September or October 1951, various industrial disputes affecting the interests of the workmen of the colliery were pending settlement and the services of Dwarika Singh were essential for the carrying of the bargaining on the part of the Colliery Mazdoor Congress and the workmen. It was then alleged that from the middle of September 1951, Dwarika Singh had been ailing and from 14th October 1951 he became very ill and the management put him on sick leave, having sent him on 18th October 1951 to the Chief Medical Officer, and that during the aforesaid period of sick leave, he was served with an order of transfer. Then it has been alleged that this order was clearly mala fide as by that order, he was transferred to a far off place for no justifiable cause at a time when he was under medical treatment and could not be spared for maintaining industrial peace. He was not in a physically fit condition to comply with the order of transfer. All these allegations have been denied by the management in their written statement. The union has not led any evidence in support of any of these allegations. Dwarika Singh has not been examined as a witness. There is no evidence to show that he was a very important and prominent member of the colliery Mazdoor Congress. Mr. Bhattacharji on behalf of the management did not dispute that Dwarika Singh may have been a member of the Union, but he vehemently denied that Dwarika Singh was an important or prominent member of the Union. Reliance, however, was placed on behalf of the workmen on Exhibit 32, which is a copy of terms of agreement between the Colliery Mazdoor Congress and the management of the Dhemo main colliery. It shows that the Union had served a strike notice on the management on 20th November 1951. Conciliation proceedings were held on 28th November 1951 and Exhibit 32 is a copy of those proceedings. The names of persons who were present are mentioned at the top. It shows that Mr. Rudra, Office Secretary of the Colliery Mazdoor Congress, represented the workers and that Mr. B. P. Jha, Vice-President of the Colliery Mazdoor Congress and other workers were present. At the bottom Mr. Rudra, Mr. Jha and Mr. Dwarika Singh have signed these proceedings. From this, it was argued that Dwarika Singh was an important member of the Union and was taking an active part in its work. This however happened on 28th November 1951 i.e. after the order of dismissal was passed. It may be noted that the order of transfer was passed on 16th October 1951 and the question is whether on that date Mr. Dwarika Singh was an important member of the Union and whether he was transferred because of his union activities. The above proceedings would at best show that he may have been taking some interest in the Union activities on 28th November 1951. As this document is signed by him after the present dispute arose, it would have very little evidentiary value.

17. It may also be noted that transfer is the function of the management and the management have ordinarily the right to transfer an employee from one place to another and merely because a transfer happened to be of an important member of the trade union, it could not necessarily be said that he was transferred for union activities. Probably because of this, it has been alleged in para. 4 of the Union's written statement that in about September or October 1951, various industrial disputes affecting the interests of the workmen of the Dhemo Main Colliery were pending settlement, and that the services of Dwarika Singh were essential for the carrying of bargaining on the part of the labour union. These allegations were denied and there is not an iota of evidence to show that there were any disputes pending between the management and the workmen in September or October 1951. Even Exhibit 32 above referred to shows that a strike notice was given on 20th November 1951. No witness has been examined as to when the dispute had arisen or as to whether the dispute was pending on the date of transfer. In the absence of any evidence on the point it could not be assumed that the transfer of Dwarika Singh was not bona fide. As I said above, the transfer of an employee is within the powers of the management and unless it is shown to be mala fide, it could not be held that the transfer was not justified, because it would mean that a prominent member of the labour union could never be transferred. That would be absurd and undesirable. Of course, if a person is a prominent member of the labour union and if he is transferred at a time when some dispute is going on between the employer and the union, a presumption may arise that the transfer was not bona fide. In the present case, however, it has not been shown that Dwarika Singh was a prominent member of the Union nor has it been shown that any dispute was pending between the management and the Union at the time of his transfer. In the circumstances, I am not satisfied that the transfer was not bona fide.

18. It was then alleged in the written statement that Dwarika Singh had been ailing from the middle of September and that he became very ill on 14th October 1951 and that the order of transfer was passed during the period of his sick leave. All these allegations have been denied by the management. There is no evidence to show that Dwarika Singh was ailing from middle of September or that he became very ill on 14th October 1951. Actually the attendance registers and the pay book of the colliery show that Dwarika Singh was present on duty throughout the month of September 1951 and also from 1st October 1951 right upto 16th October 1951. He was not absent even for a single day during this period. The allegation, therefore, that he was ailing from middle of September or that he became very ill from 14th October 1951 cannot be believed. He has not been examined in support of this allegation. The above books show that he was sick from 17th October 1951. Exhibit 15 is a certificate dated 17th October 1951 from the Medical Officer of the Dhemo Main Colliery, stating that Dwarika Singh was suffering from pain in the Epigastrium and that it would take three or four days to recover. Exhibit 16 is another certificate of the Medical Officer dated 22nd October 1951 stating that Dwarika Singh who was placed on sick leave from 17th October 1951 was fit for work. This would show that Dwarika Singh was suffering from some pain in the stomach between 17th October 1951 and 22nd October 1951 only. The order of transfer Exhibit 14 was passed on 18th October 1951 and appears to have been communicated to him on 17th October 1951. It was on that very day that he got the above pain. The management alleged that his illness was fake. Whether it was fake or not, it is certain that his allegation that the order of transfer was served on him during the period of his sick leave does not appear to be correct.

19. The written statement of the Union has also mentioned that the order of transfer was passed at a time when he was under medical treatment and he was physically unable to comply with it. As I said above, his illness lasted from 17th October 1951 to 22nd October 1951. The order of transfer was passed before he became ill. He could have requested the management to extend or postpone the date of his transfer but he did not do so. Actually it was only on 13th November 1951 that the management served the charge-sheet Exhibit 17 to him. In other words, they waited for more than three weeks after he was found fit by the medical officer, before serving a charge-sheet on him.

20. A ground has been made out in the written statement that the order of dismissal was in violation of Section 33 of the Industrial Disputes Act. It was firstly contended that conciliation proceedings were going on before the Conciliation Officer and hence the order of dismissal during the pendency of those proceedings would violate Section 33. The management stated that conciliation proceedings were held on 25th October 1951 and failed on that very day as no amicable settlement could be arrived at. They further stated that the Conciliation Officer sent his report to the Government on 31st October 1951 and it must have reached the Government within three or four days and hence on 13th November 1951, no conciliation proceedings were pending. No evidence has been led by either party and there is nothing on record to show that on 16th November 1951 (when the order of dismissal was passed) the conciliation proceedings were pending. Similarly, there is no evidence to show that any reference was pending before the Tribunal on that date. The reference regarding paid holidays which is referred to in the written statement was made to this Tribunal in May 1952. Hence also there was no violation of Section 33. I may mention at this stage that Mr. Rudra did not urge before me that the dismissal was in violation of Section 33 of the Industrial Disputes Act.

21. Mr. Rudra however argued that the order of transfer was bad because the management had no power to transfer Dwarika Singh from the colliery. In this connection, the management relied on rule 26 of their standing orders. This rule lays down that all workmen were liable to be transferred from one department to another or from one station to another or from one colliery to another under the same management provided such transfer did not cause any prejudice to their wages and other conditions of service and provided that reasonable notice was given of such transfer. Mr. Rudra argued that it was a very wide power and that probably the word "management" was used for the word "manager". He urged that the word "management" should not be taken to mean the managing agents, because the managing agents may be changed from time to time and because the managing agents may take up new collieries for management at a future date. He argued that supposing that the managing agents took up a colliery in Africa for management, could it be taken that they could transfer a workman to that colliery under this rule. Hence he argued that probably the word "management" was used instead of "manager". There is however nothing to justify this interpretation. The word "management" has been used not only in Rule 26 but also in Rule 22 while the word "manager" has been used in some other rules. It could not be said that the word "management" or "manager" should be interchanged nor could it be said that what was meant by the word "management" was the manager. Ordinarily, there is one manager for one colliery and there would be no meaning in this rule of giving the power of transfer from one colliery to another under the same manager.

22. It was then said that the managing agents might be changed or the managing agents might take up some colliery, say in Africa, for management and the rule would empower an employee to be transferred to Africa. It may, however, be noted that rule requires that the transfer should not cause any prejudice to the wages of the workmen and his other conditions of service. If a person is sought to be transferred to a foreign country, it could be said that the transfer would cause prejudice to the conditions of his service.

23. In the present case, the power of transfer from one colliery to another appears to have been recognised and admitted by Dwarika Singh. Annexure 'A' to the written statement of the Union is a letter written by the Union, to the Conciliation Officer. It has been mentioned therein that Dwarika Singh who was ordered to be transferred to Kenduadih was working in the Dhemu Main colliery for ten years and previously served under the same management in the Dishergarh field for ten years. In para. 1 of the written statement of the Union, it has been mentioned that Dwarika Singh had been working under the above named employers in the Dishergarh field for about 23 years, and as an overman in the Dhemo Main Colliery for ten years. This shows that he was working in the Dishergarh field in the colliery of the same management prior to his transfer to the Dhemo Main Colliery. In other words, not only did Dwarika Singh know that he was liable to be transferred from one colliery to another under the same management, but in actual fact he had been so transferred on one previous occasion. I therefore hold that the management had every right under the above rule of the standing orders to transfer him from one colliery to another under their own management.

24. The above rule requires that the transfer should not cause prejudice to the wages or to the conditions of service. No allegation has been made that the transfer caused such a prejudice. No doubt it has been mentioned in the written statement that the transfer was to a far off place. The Kenduadih colliery I am told, is about 45 miles from Dhemo Main Colliery. It is, however, to be remembered that Dwarika Singh does not belong to a place which is near either to Dhemo Main Colliery or to Kenduadih colliery or Dishergarh field. He comes from the State of Uttar Pradesh which is a distance of more than 500 miles and the question whether he was at Kenduadih or at Dhemo main would not make much difference to him in point of distance. I am therefore not satisfied that the transfer caused him any prejudice.

25. As I said above, in the written statement the transfer has been challenged mainly on the ground that it was not bona fide because it was made when he was ill and when his presence was required for union activities. As I pointed out, neither of these allegations has been proved. On the whole, I therefore hold that his transfer was justified.

26. As the transfer was justified, his failure to carry out the orders of transfer amounted to a wilful disobedience of the order of superiors under clause (1) of Rule 27 of the standing orders which amounted to misconduct. A charge sheet was duly served on him and after considering it, he was dismissed. The order of dismissal was also therefore justified.

The result would be that he would not be entitled to reinstatement or any other relief.

To sum up, the reference is bad in law because Dwarika Singh was not a workman and hence there can be no industrial dispute regarding his dismissal. On merits also, his transfer and dismissal were justified and he is therefore not entitled to any relief. I pass my award accordingly.
